JACOB SCHWEPPE

Jacob Schweppe was the first to bring sparkling beverages to the world, setting in motion a beverage revolution that would far surpass his wildest dreams. His legacy of passion, innovation, craft, quality and real ingredients lives on to this day.

A German-born Swiss watchmaker and jeweller by trade, he founded Schweppes in Geneva, Switzerland in 1783. Five years later the first fleet landed in Australia.

OUR HISTORY

Our story began in 1783 when Jacob Schweppe brought ‘Schweppervescence’ to life. He perfected the way of capturing and bottling bubbles (the process of carbonation) – and founded Schweppes in Geneva. The company eventually expanded into England and his sparkling soda waters were endorsed by leading doctors and sold as a treatment for a variety of ailments. It was described as “a safe and cooling drink for persons exhausted by much speaking, heated by dancing or crowded assemblies”.
